Reid S. Simpson practices primarily in the areas of litigation, education, and labor and employment law. He represents both private and public institutions in education and employment matters. He advises school districts, charter schools, private schools, colleges, and universities throughout Missouri with respect to employment and litigation matters. Prior to joining Tueth Keeney, Reid practiced at a firm in St. Louis in commercial litigation, with his primary focus on contract litigation, complex litigation, and appellate advocacy.

Reid came to law after ten years in education, starting as a tenured high-school physics teacher and ending as a public-school administrator in both public district schools as well as charter schools. While in education, he worked with all grade levels of students, PreK through 12. During law school, Reid worked as an intern at the Missouri Court of Appeals, Eastern District, under the Honorable Roy Richter. Reid graduated from Saint Louis University School of Law with a concentration in Labor & Employment Law from the William C. Wefel Center for Employment Law. He served as the Lead Managing Editor of the ABA Journal of Labor & Employment Law.
